TIER-ED SPEAKER SERIES

Ideological proclivities in learning technologies: What "else" do we teach and learn when we use technology in the classroom?

Presented by

Dr. Thomas M. Philip

Professor, Graduate School of Education, University of Berkeley

Friday, December 3
1 p.m. – 2 p.m.
Zoom link:
https://tinyurl.com/wbdykj6a

Abstract: In this talk, Dr. Thomas M. Philip will explore how ideologies are intertwined with disciplinary learning, especially when using technology. He will consider the pedagogical, theoretical, and methodological insights and possibilities when the local construction and contestation of ideologies are foregrounded in classroom interactions that entail learning technologies.

Bio: Dr. Thomas M. Philip is a Professor at the Graduate School of Education, University of Berkeley and his research focuses on how teachers make sense of power and hierarchy in classrooms, schools, and society. His recent scholarship is centered on understanding the possibilities and tensions that emerge with the use of artificial intelligence, data analytics, and digital learning technologies. Dr. Philip's work has been published in top journals and he has received many awards from AERA, Spencer Foundation, and others.